

Conference “Kant and the World Today”

Johns Hopkins University

March 8-9, 2024

Program

Friday, March 8

4:00 pm

Welcome address, Hodson Hall 210

Andrew Chignell (Princeton) and Katharina Kraus (Johns Hopkins)

4:15 – 6:00 pm

Opening Keynote Lecture, Hodson Hall 210

Pauline Kleingeld (University of Groningen)

“Kant’s racism and Kant’s anti-colonialism”

Chair: Lucy Allais (Johns Hopkins)

Saturday, March 9

Panel Discussions, Gilman Hall 132

9:00 – 10:45 am

Panel 1: Kant on Political Economy

Lucy Allais (Johns Hopkins):

“Kant on Markets and the Commons”

Jordan Pascoe (Manhattan College):

“Kant on Labor”

Garrath Williams (Lancaster University):

“A Kantian Perspective on the Business Corporation”

Chair: Tim Jankowiak (Towson University)

11:15 am – 12:00 pm

Talk and Discussion with the Dramaturg

Drew Lichtenberg (Associate Director, Shakespeare Theatre Company):

“The Last Chapter in the History of the World: Kleist’s Puppet, Bernhard’s Parrot, and Post-Kantian Dramaturgies in German Theater”

Chair: Abraham Stoll (Johns Hopkins)

Saturday, March 9

Panel Discussions, Gilman Hall 132

12:00 pm – 1:30 pm

Lunch break

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

Panel 2: Kant on Hope in the face of Global Challenges

Kristi Sweet (Texas A&M University):

“Hope in Dark Times”

Andrew Chignell (Princeton University):

“Collective Hope in the Face of Individual Futility”

Laura Papish (George Washington University):

“Kant on Creative Hope When Time Has Run Out”

Chair: Mavis Biss (Loyola University Maryland)

3:45 pm – 6:00 pm

Panel 3: Kant on Universalism, Cosmopolitanism, Gender and Race

Helga Varden (University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign): “Humanizing

Kant and Kantian Philosophy: Method, Identities, and the Isms”

Stefanie Buchenau (Université Paris VIII):

“Kant on the Citizen of the Earth”

Jameliah Shorter-Bourhanou (University of Memphis):

“Why Kant’s Thoughts on Race Matter”

Inés Valdez (Johns Hopkins):

“The Limits of Kant’s Cosmopolitanism: Then and Now”

Katharina Kraus (Johns Hopkins):

“Kant on Human Perspectives, the Particularity of Experience, and Shared Horizons”

Chair: Jochen Bojanowski (University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign)